Hi Stephanie,

In this week's Focus, we're talking about career exploration in the middle grades and why it's an essential part of any curriculum. Our collaboration meet-ups continue this week with engaging alternatives to the traditional review worksheet and how to use tech to create mindfulness breaks in the classroom. Don't forget to encourage your students to participate in the Great Middle School Student Voice Off by October 7th. The finalists will compete live at #AMLE21 this November 4-7.

In fact, the middle grades are the ideal time to introduce careers, since young adolescents are the most receptive to positive change following a career development program.

A Playbook for Career Exploration in the Middle Grades

Career exploration is possible in every school and for every student with the right resources in hand. That's why AMLE has teamed up with American Student Assistance to create an online playbook that equips educators with a roadmap and tools to start a career exploration program that works for your school community. Learn more at our September 28th meet-up and hear from 6th grade science teacher Julie DiPilato who developed a whole-school career exploration program at Barnstable Intermediate School in Hyannis, MA.
