

Middle School Student Sound Off

*Courtney Kucharski, Grade 8
Franklin Avenue Middle School*

In the maze of adolescence, lost they roam,
Middle schoolers, carrying burdens unknown.
Caught between childhood and the adult world's sway,
Struggling to find their voice, day by day.

Awkward moments, laughter, and fears,
Growing pains echoing through the years.
Navigating cliques and social norms,
In a sea of expectation, their spirit mourns.

Homework piles high, and deadlines draw near,
Pressure mounts, igniting silent fear.
Navigating identities, trying to fit in,
In a world where acceptance feels like a win.

Body changes, emotions run high,
Tears and uncertainty all cloud the eye
In the disorderly journey, they try to stand.
Learning to navigate life's shifting sand.

Though the road is tough, and trials persist,
Middle schoolers persist, in their quest to exist
For in the heart of every middle schooler's quest,
Lies the promise of tomorrow, a journey blessed.
